COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Overview of major law and policy issues related to therapeutic recreation services for people with disabilities. Primary focus is on the Americans with Disabilities Act and related federal legislation.

COURSE OVERVIEW: This course provides an overview of several major law and policy issues to meet law related professional competencies related to provision of community recreation and educational services to special populations. Primary focus is on the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and related federal legislation (e.g., Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act, Architectural Barriers Act, and Individuals with Disabilities Education Act). The ADA and related federal legislation is defined through readily available information resources on the Internet, including judicial opinions, legislation, regulations, administrative technical assistance and consent decrees.

COURSE OBJECTIVES: At the completion of this course students should be able to:

- (1) To read a series of articles and case reports which illustrate general legal principles governing disability rights law in sports and recreation..
- (2) To identify general legal principles and rules of law governing disability rights law in sports and recreation as described in video lectures, review questions, objectives, and required reading material used in the course.

(3) To identify definitions and terms which demonstrate a working knowledge of federal civil rights laws and their applicability to sports, recreation, and physical education programs, specifically d the Americans with Disabilities Act and related legislation.

REQUIRED READINGS:

In lieu of a traditional "textbook," this course will attempt to maximize effective utilization of readily available information resources on the Internet which define the scope and applicability of the Americans with Disabilities Act and related federal disability law, including judicial opinions, legislation, regulations, administrative technical assistance and consent decrees. In addition, course materials include a compilation of case reports and related articles, which I have written for the "NRPA Law Review" column in Parks & Recreation magazine.

EVALUATION 3 exams (open book, weighted equally)

Each exam is composed of approx. 50-75 multiple choice questions. The exams are based on required readings and class lectures. To prepare for the exams, students will be required to focus on the applicable rules of law illustrated and distinguished by the case reports and court opinions in the required readings.

Each exam will test students' understanding of general principles of constitutional law and case examples described in the required readings and lectures. Exam questions will measure students' abilities to identify general legal principles used by the court to resolve questions of constitutional law in a particular case.

In addition, a number of multiple choice questions will be based on recent related court opinions, which are not covered in the class lectures. These will be identified throughout the semester. Students will be responsible for reading and analyzing these supplemental opinions. In these unfamiliar supplemental court opinions, students must be able to identify the issues, rules of law, and the manner in which the court applied significant facts to the relevant rules of law to resolve identified issues and reach its conclusion.
